

I agree with the FIST's filing, However I feel that any type of amateur radio exam should include the Morse requirement to gain high frequency access. Morse skills are very important in time of distress and should not be dropped for any reason. Just because some other nations are dropping Morse the United States should retain its high standards and not follow suit.